And Basest of Ingrates.

On last Wednesday Mr. Davidson, of Iberville, rising to a question of privilege, in the Convention said:

I rise to a question of privilege. When those sacred principles of honor and justice which every selfrespecting man holds most dear to him are invaded and trampled upon by a venal and corrupt press, it is then indeed ample time for him to protect his natural and political Account sales promptly rendered and satisfaction guaranteed. Liberal advances made on consignments, and purchases made in this market at lowest rates for rights. . The New Orleans Times, in its issue of the 9th inst., goes out of its asurl course of vituperation, in order to impugn the colored delegates to this Convention, of which I am proud to be one, with the charge of sharing or to share in a fund of $17,000, which it avers has been raised for the purpose of bribing the members of this honorable body. The article to which I refer (and which I now ask the clerk to read) uses the following language, which I hold to be infamous in the extreme, and worthy only of that individual proprietor of the Times, who, only by a quick resignation, escaped a long imprisonment in the penitentiary as punishment for years of dishonesty, by which he enriched himself at the expense of the community, and cast irremediable odium and dishonor on the Republican party. The gentlemen making the majority report on the Elective Franchi have overshot their mark in drawing the line between the few and the many, the rich and the poor, for the right belongs to every citizen and follows the acquisition of citizenship, and you gentlemen of the majority cannot afford to fetter this most sacred boon of American liberty.

any clause restrictive of the rights and liberties of the people, I, for one, cannot and will not recommend now before this Convention, I ask you, gentlemen, to pause, and calmly consider whether or not there is any wisdom in tampering with this matter. Your ancestors handed it down to you, free and unrestricted. without price and without money: Let us entrust it to our future gen-erations unconditionally. Already vast fields of richest lands are lying waste and untilled; disorganized labor and wide-spread unrest prevails among the laboring masses ful to the eye and pleasing to the senses, are now depopulated and left a ruined wreck of the past. We call the attention of our readers to a careful reading of the specches of several of the colored members of the Convention, printed on our first and fourth pages. That the right to vote is left unhampered by any kind of restrictions, is a result largely due to the bold stand that was assumed by the Republican members in the Convention. The political sky of our State looks bright.

An Illiberal Spirit.

The communication published in one will concede that. But we judge the case by the circumstances surrounding it, rather than by the prosaic idea of absolute right. What are the circumstances con-
